Parents Must Learn to Advocate Effectively

Raising a child who has special needs requires a parent who understands what services are available and how to access them. We can teach you how to advocate for your child. Family Network on Disabilities (FND) of Broward County, Inc., is based on the philosophy that parents who have children with special needs are the best source of information and support for others parents. Our staff is comprised of parents who are trained as advocates and can provide you with the training and assistance you need to become an advocate for your child and family. We will provide you with valuable information and individual assistance regarding the services available to you and your child.

FND is a family-centered nonprofit offering support to families of children with disabilities.

FND provides assistance in seeking and obtaining necessary education, early intervention, medical, and therapeutic support services.

FND encourages parents to become equal partners in their children's education process and promotes the idea that a well-informed parent is the best advocate for his or her child.

FND believes that a knowledgeable and ethical advocacy effort can make a positive impact on the quality of services for children with disabilities.
